Field Period Internship Program

The Keuka College Field Period internship program provides students the opportunity to link academic learning with hands-on experiences. The College dedicates approximately one month of the academic calendar for students to concentrate solely on their Field Period internship. These internships are a minimum of 140-hour experiences done each year by all students. Through Field Period internships, students can explore and develop career possibilities, test academic principles, investigate diverse environments or cultures, raise awareness of social responsibility, and enhance their cultural understanding of the world. Field Period requirements may be completed anywhere, from the local community to foreign countries. The faculty supports and works closely with students in planning, preparing, and evaluating Field Period internships.

Admissions Essay

One of the best features of Keuka College is the way our students, professors and advisers get to know each other by working closely together. We hope this application will also help us get to know you better. Please tell us more about the kind of person you are by typing a short essay of one-to-two pages, double-spaced, about one of the following two choices:

1. Field Period is the heart and soul of Keuka's commitment to experiential, hands-on learning. It gives students a chance to match what they learn in the classroom to the "real world." During Field Period, students spend 140 hours each year learning what it takes to be successful after college. In your essay, imagine you are designing a Field Period to complete before your first day at Keuka College. Tell us: What kind of organization would you seek to join during this Field Period internship? What would you study? What would you hope to learn?

-OR-

2. What events in your life (for example, things that have happened to you in your home, school, work, family, or neighborhood) do you think have prepared you to become a valuable member of the Keuka College community?
